Life's a Riot at the City

It is half past six in the morning, just after sunrise, when the Mümmel family get up; by half past eleven at night they've already been in bed for quite some time. Spread across seven huge double pages there's plenty to discover for young children – all the various activities going in a city on a normal humdrum day. Plus there's a hot trail of Benny Badger, the king of burglars.

There's lots of things happening in a city on any given day. And you can bet that the children will not tire of following events and spinning out the tale.
